

BERLANDIERA LYRATA CHOCOLATE FLOWER

This native perennial forms a rosette of medium green, fiddle-shaped leaves. The yellow daisy flowers with maroon centers are borne on slender stems held above the foliage. These flowers are famous for their chocolate fragrance, which is most prominent in the early mornings. Butterflies are also attracted to their nectar. If plants start to look scraggly, they can be sheared periodically to initiate fresh growth. It grows in the Southwest in grasslands from 4000 to 6000 feet. Chocolate flower's compact size makes it ideal for use in perennial borders, or in small patio areas, where the heady fragrance can be enjoyed. Old flower heads can be removed to prolong the blooming.

AT A GLANCE SUMMARY
SIZE (H X W)	1 foot x 2 feet
FLOWER COLOR	Yellow
FLOWER SEASON	Summer, Fall
EXPOSURE	Full Sun, Part Shade
WATER	Low
GROWTH RATE	Fast
HARDINESS	-30° F, USDA Zone 4
PRUNING	In Late Winter

PERENNIAL