

JUSTICIA FULVICOMA

Low-growing and compact, this shrub combines lush green foliage and unique spikes of reddish-orange flowers. It has large, oval and slightly pubescent leaves. The unusual flower clusters consist of tubular flowers stacked between large, reddish, triangular bracts. It thrives in filtered sun locations, such as under the open canopies of desert trees, and retains its compact form even in shady exposures. Justicia fulvicoma often looks stressed in full sun and reflected heat locations.
