

PEDILANTHUS BRACTEATUS TALL SLIPPER PLANT

Pedilanthus bracteatus is a great succulent that can thrive in a variety of exposures. This is a thicker, more substantial cousin of P. macrocarpus, and also tolerates full sun and frost much better. These will stay in leaf through the warm season, although they will produce more leaves in the shade. This is also a great bloomer. You can expect to have the red-orange flower bracts grace your plants from early summer through the fall. Great choice for containers or in the ground.
